Quality early care and education is vital to your child's future. Discover what quality looks like.

Written by Kelli Hilburn, Better Beginnings Program Administrator

Research tells us the most effective learning happens through play and positive interactions with family and educators.

Positive interactions and learning through play

Your family creates positive interactions when you hold your child and talk to them, play and read to them. When you focus your attention on your child, you help them learn and show them how important they are to you.

Your quality early care and education program

Children should enjoy warm, positive interactions with other children and staff. Quality early care teachers respond to your child's needs. They play with, talk to and read to the children in their care much like you do at home.

The facility provides active play areas indoors and outdoors, and areas for quiet play and rest.

Better Beginnings is administered by the Arkansas Department of Education.

Interactions and discoveries go together. Quality early care and education provides opportunities for both.

Early science learning may include hands-on sensory play with child safe playdough. When the teacher says, "You can squeeze it through your fingers or make it look like a worm, or a pie," your child discovers the power to use their own imagination to create something new and understand another part of their world.

Scan the code to find your early care and education partner at Better Beginnings.

Your older toddler may discover the science by making playdough. Talk about a discovery – a toy made from salt, flour, and a little oil and water.

Interactions between your child and their teachers lead to a desire to explore and learn.

Be part of the experience. Ask your child's teacher what they learned today. They're happy to share the recipe for fun learning!

his July marks the 22nd consecutive year for Occasions' Readers' Choice Awards, so we are diving in and making a splash with this year's theme as we celebrate the winners and finalists of our 2025 contest.

For more than two decades, Jonesboro Occasions has invited readers to vote for their favorite foods, people, places, artists, businesses, restaurants and more. Our readers begin voting online in May, and after all votes have been tallied, winners are notified in June. Winners and finalists are revealed and celebrated in the July issue.

The Occasions staff has been honored to be a part of recognizing local businesses, services, venues, events and individuals who help make Jonesboro a better place. Whether you are in search of the best taco in the city, the best local park for a family outing or the best person to book for that much-needed massage, our readers have weighed in, and we are pleased to announce this year's winners.

In celebration of this year's award winners, Occasions Art Director Brittney Osborn chose a summer pool vibe for this issue. She and graphic design intern Victoria Mantz spent several weeks putting a summer vibe spin on the cover and inside the Readers' Choice section. Together, we chased dozens of floats and props around the pool in the heat of an Arkansas summer to make it happen.

In addition to the complete list of winners in our 2025 Readers' Choice section, you'll find stories about local people, businesses and events in this issue. Read about three new art exhibitions opening this month at Bradbury Art Museum; discover the heartfelt story behind Flags Across Jonesboro as we prepare for Independence Day; and find out how employees of a local hospital are raising funds to honor one of their own.

We are thankful for those who continue to invest their time, effort and resources in Jonesboro and hope you will find old favorites, as well as new places to try, among our list of Readers' Choice winners. As you read through the many winners and finalists recognized inside this issue, please remember to continue to support locally-owned businesses whenever possible.

Congratulations to our 2025 winners and finalists! You have made a big splash with our readers, and we are diving in to celebrate you.

If you've got a career, you have something important to share with Jonesboro's kids.

That's the mission of the Jonesboro Business Association (JBA), a nonprofit mentoring program focused on building a 10-year path from adolescence to adulthood for local students ages 14 to 24. JBA equips these students with the tools they need to succeed: academic support, mentorship, life skills, community engagement and career preparation.

JBA begins by helping students develop the right mindset one of ambition, growth and service to others. Then they are provided with what many don't have access to: test prep, goal setting, tutoring, mentorships, motivational speakers and exposure to realworld business experiences.

As students graduate high school, JBA stays with them, offering resumé coaching, mock interviews, job shadowing and direct connections to business leaders and entrepreneurs. Whether they

We need speakers, mentors and story-sharers from Jonesboro businesses and entrepreneurs — people who remember what it was like to be young and uncertain, and who are willing to offer wisdom and encouragement.

There are more than 600 students in three local schools currently involved in JBA. They are eager, focused and ready to grow. What they need now is you. Because every entrepreneur's story begins with: "When I was a child..."

New Exhibits Open at Bradbury Art Museum

Inaugural 'Gathering' Exhibition and Solo Exhibits To Be Featured

STORY AND PHOTOS SUBMITTED BY ARKANSAS STATE UNIVERSITY

"Gathering: At the Kitchen Table," a juried exhibition of regional Arkansas artists, opened June 28 at Bradbury Art Museum (BAM) on the campus of Arkansas State University. Also opening will be "Breaking Binaries: Hybrid Processes" and "Bridging Geographies of Labor," solo exhibitions from Hannah Keats and Ebenezer Nketsiah Mensah.

All three exhibitions were set in motion by open call processes: one for artists living in 25 Arkansas counties in Northeast Arkansas and the Delta and one for artists around the country who recently graduated from Master of Fine Arts (MFA) degree programs. From the submissions, MFA studio art graduates Hannah Keats and Ebenezer Nketsiah Mensah were selected by BAM staff.

The 26 artists included in "Gathering: At the Kitchen Table" were selected by juror Andrew Fernandez, who serves as visiting professor of sculpture at Arkansas State University.

This marks the inaugural opening for "Gathering," which will be an annual juried exhibition of artists from NEA and the Delta. Each year, an individual from the regional arts community will be selected to serve as the juror for the exhibition; their task will be to closely examine the entries and select the pieces on exhibit — along with the first, second and third place, and juror's merit awards.

The theme for the exhibition will be selected annually by a member of the BAM staff. This year's theme, chosen by assistant director Madeline McMahan, was "at the kitchen table," showcasing artwork the same size or smaller than a standard kitchen table.

"In speaking with community artists, so many of us are making work alongside full-time jobs and in our own homes," said McMahan. "I wanted this year's exhibition to honor the dedication and perseverance of these artists who are making their work even when it means working at the kitchen table."

The selected artists are Matt E. Ball, artist couple Brad Benefield and Natausha Light, Jordan Blake, Deb Peregrine Callahan, Dylan Carter, Angela Castro, Tami Chandler, Aaron Conger, Danyelle Schwarz Hutton, Evka JG, Amber Jones, sister duo Nicole Jones and Marissa Russell, Irina Khramtsova, Shannon Lamb, Victoria Mantz, Jennifer Masley, Cheryl McMickle, Nathan Pietrykowski, Anna Rafalowski, Stephanie Ramirez, Tom Richard, Sara Sills, Sharline Vanpelt and Michael Whiteside. Awards will be announced at the opening reception.

"On the BAM team, we talk a lot about using a 'whole body approach' to supporting the arts; we try to launch projects that support our artists from more than one angle," said McMahan. "We want to be a platform for our community to experience contemporary art without having to leave the region, and we want to provide professional development opportunities for regional artists, as well. We want to want to support arts engagement in the region, and we want to provide support for artists."

On view alongside "Gathering" will be "Breaking Binaries: Hybrid Processes" and "Bridging Geographies of Labor" from recent MFA graduates Hannah Keats and Ebenezer Nketsiah Mensah. All three exhibitions were the result of discussions about how to use this 'whole-body approach' with the BAM exhibition schedule.

"Arkansas State University has an incredible BFA studio art program, of which I am a very proud alumna," McMahan added. "Although we do not offer an MFA studio art degree, our hope was that this call would provide exhibition opportunities for graduating MFA students as they're in the early stages of launching their creative careers, and we also want to give our own local emerging artists—if they are interested in pursuing an MFA—some insights into the programs that exist."

Solo Exhibitions

Hannah Keats holds a Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA) degree from the University of North Florida, and she received her MFA in studio art from Florida State University in May 2025. An interdisciplinary painter, she creates biomorphic artworks inspired by nature and science fiction using materials that range from paint to velvet flocking to digital and lenticular prints.

Ebenezer Nketsiah Mensah received a BFA in painting and sculpture from Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology, and he was awarded his MFA in studio art from the University of Florida in May 2025. He is a multidisciplinary artist whose work explores identity, labor, memory and power. His practice dwells on his experiences as a worker in Tarkwa, Ghana.

Admission to the exhibitions, which will continue through July 30, is free. For more details about Bradbury Art Museum, call (870) 972-3434 or visit bradburyartmuseum.org.

very year, NEA Baptist Charitable Foundation encourages its employees to invest in all that the nonprofit does for the community through its Day of Giving fundraiser. This year, a cookbook comprised of 105 recipes submitted by primary care and urgent care staff raised funds for NEA Baptist Charitable Foundation's ShareHope Family Fund in loving memory of William Clayton Collins.

"Each spring, we invite team members to donate through various fundraising campaigns or by payroll deduction to support the free programs and services the foundation provides," said NEA Baptist Charitable Foundation Events Manager Rhonda Parker. "Ambrea Owens is our director of clinical operations. She had the idea to create a cookbook filled with recipes from our clinic team members and providers to raise money for our ShareHope Family Fund. ShareHope cares for families after the tragic loss of an infant, providing memory boxes, financial support and grief support through our licensed therapists at NEA Baptist Center for Good Grief.

"The cookbook idea was a huge success, and Ambrea collected over 100 recipes from NEA Baptist clinics. She then spent hours and hours formatting the recipes to put them into a book form. We created a giving page where people could purchase either a digital copy of the cookbook or a printed copy, raising $3,140 to support ShareHope."

Owens, who has been with NEA Baptist for 14 years, said she was inspired by a cookbook that her church's youth group had put together to raise money for a mission trip.

"ShareHope is such a worthy cause because it helps families in times of loss and crisis when they are unsure what to do," said Owens. "This program provides them the support they need to navigate an incredibly sad and challenging time in their lives. It gives them the necessary resources they need to lay their lost baby to rest with the dignity and love they deserve. It provides them with tools to cope and try to move forward with their lives in the aftermath of such loss."

In honor of one of their own, the cookbook was dedicated to William Collins, the son of Clay and Tyler Collins. Tyler began working at NEA Baptist in 2019 and has held a variety of positions since, including working for Owens for three years. When Owens decided on the ShareHope fundraiser, she reached out to Tyler and asked if she could honor William in the cookbook. Owens wanted to share William's story and how ShareHope played a role in that.

"William's mother, Tyler, worked for two of our primary care clinics," said Owens. "She is an incredibly sweet and giving person who deserved to have her sweet William remembered in a big way. Our team felt that honoring William with this cookbook was the right thing to do. It was our pleasure to give this family a voice to tell their story."

The Collins' journey began when they arrived at the hospital on Sept. 9 for Tyler's routine cesarean section. Despite a typical appointment the previous Thursday, the nurses could not find a heartbeat, and the family was left to figure out what to do in the wake of their loss. They are thankful that ShareHope helped them navigate that heartbreaking situation.

"At this moment, we were completely in shock and had no clue what our next steps were," said Tyler. "Our nurse, Kelly, broke everything down to us and helped every step of the way. This is when she explained all the resources and items provided to us by ShareHope. She took his hand and footprints for the Mamie's Poppy Plate. as well as placing them in a Bible. She showed us the cuddle cot, Bridget's Cradle, and how it worked and explained that it allowed parents to stay with their babies as long as they would like. She even told us they had burial gowns if we needed one. After our families came in to visit William, we scheduled a photo shoot with a local photographer, Melissa Donner. She came that day and took photos of us and William, all provided by the hospital, as well.

Ambrea Owens, Tyler Collins

"Before we left, we were given a beautiful memory box with information, a teddy bear, a children's book to help explain the event to our son Jackson, the blankets and hat he used, and information on the Center for Good Grief. Along with that when we were planning the funeral, we learned that ShareHope also helps financially with funeral costs."

Tyler says her family is so thankful that proceeds from the cookbook go to such an important cause.

"You never think it's going to be you until it is," she said. "When something like this happens, the parents and family are not prepared. Having the staff trained for these events and having these resources available means the world when everything is falling apart. They truly have thought of everything you could ever need during this time of immeasurable loss.

"For us, the biggest impact ShareHope made was getting to spend extra time with William. Saying goodbye is never easy but getting to dress him and hold him for as long as we wanted was the biggest blessing I could ever asked for. This was the first time I have ever used a program like this, and it's amazing how compassionate and thoughtful others can be. They truly have thought of everything you could ever need during this time of immeasurable loss. Looking back on that day I truly believe every single person was God sent. They were all so caring, and even though this was the hardest day of my life, they all made it so much easier."

To honor William and so many others, Owens collected 105 recipes from 68 different team members. The categories of recipes include: Appetizers and Beverages; Soups, Salads, Stews and Chili; Vegetables and Side Dishes; Main Dishes; Breads, Baked Goods, and Rolls; and Desserts.

"You can tell by some of the names or stories that come with the recipe that they are family favorites that have been passed down through the generations," said Owens. "There is everything from high-protein, low-calorie recipes to recipes that likely contain all of your calories for the day. The book hosts a huge selection of recipes, from quick and simple to complicated, and everyone is sure to find some new favorites. ...

"I would like to give another shout out to our Windover team for providing 100% participation and submitting 41 of the 105 recipes. Dr. McGrath (Paragould Clinic) submitted an especially tasty recipe called Gooey Skillet Cake that's at the top of my list to try, but then again, I'm looking forward to making darn near every recipe in this book. I've received messages from employees who have made the high protein bagels and one of the cheeseburger slider recipes, both of which received rave reviews."

In honor of this story running in Occasions, the foundation has opened the cookbook back up for a one-time only opportunity for more people in the community to purchase it and support the nonprofit's ShareHope program.

"We are so proud of the cookbook and want as many people as possible to have a copy," said Owens. "Our hope is that this will become an annual tradition for our primary care team to create a new one each year to support ShareHope. Please consider purchasing a copy of this cookbook to support such a worthy cause."

MEMORIAL FUNDRAISER BENEFITS ST. BERNARDS NICU

BY AUDREY HANES PHOTOGRAPHY BY MELISSA DONNER

s Americans proudly celebrate their independence this month, the Fourth of July, along with several other significant days throughout the year, marks a day for the country to revere the American Flag. One local couple is using a patriotic fundraiser, Flags Across Jonesboro, to raise money for The Luke Kellums NICU Fund benefiting St. Bernards NICU in honor of their late son.

Luke and Kate Kellums were born prematurely at 33 weeks at St. Bernards on July 8, 2020. Although the babies were originally doing well, a week after their birth, Luke got sick with bacterial meningitis and was airlifted to Arkansas Children's Hospital in Little Rock. He fought for a week before his family had to say their earthly goodbye. Several months later, his parents, Dustin and Callie Kellums, set up the Luke Kellums NICU Fund through the Arkansas Community Foundation for St. Bernards Medical Center. To raise money for their hometown NICU, the couple started Flags Across Jonesboro.

"Luke's NICU Fund, and the Flags Across Jonesboro fundraiser specifically, give us a way to remember our precious boy. It gives us an opportunity to do something positive with our grief and help other families that have babies in the NICU." - Callie Kellums

"I got the idea for Flags Across Jonesboro from my friend who was doing this fundraiser in Magnolia," said Callie. "They were raising thousands of dollars every year, and I felt like it could be really successful here in Jonesboro."

For $100 per year, donors rent an American flag from Dustin and Callie. The Kellumses set out the flag at the donors' house or business for around a week at a time for specific holidays, then pick it back up. Flags are out for the following holidays: Memorial Day, Fourth of July, Labor Day through Patriot Day in September, and Election Day through Veterans Day in October. Thanks to the help of the couple's families and friends, the group currently puts out more than 250 flags each holiday.

"I was still pretty stuck in my grief, but Dustin pushed us to start in May 2021, and I am so thankful he did," said Callie. "Luke's NICU Fund, and the Flags Across Jonesboro fundraiser specifically, give us a way to remember our precious boy. It gives us an opportunity to do something positive with our grief and help other families that have babies in the NICU. Having a child in the NICU is difficult in itself, but if you have other children at home or don't have enough leave from work to stay with your child all the time or have to drive from another city, that makes it even more difficult. We aim to help St. Bernards care for as many babies as possible here so that families don't have to travel any farther for care.

"Some neighborhoods have been super engaged and supportive. It is incredible to see flags lining the streets. They look beautiful and, of course, so patriotic. We love being able to drive around and show (7-year-old Ben and 5-year-old Kate) Luke's flags."

To date, The Luke Kellums NICU Fund benefiting St. Bernards has donated more than $136,000 to the St. Bernards NICU. The first $36,000 of the funds raised was for items specifically requested by the NICU, such as a specialized mattress, a Bili Blanket machine, a supply cart, two cribettes, bereavement kits and a NICU-specific ventilator. Most recently, the nonprofit donated $100,000 to help fund a four-bed expansion to the NICU that is designed as a step-down room for babies who don't need to remain in the NICU but aren't ready to go home.

"This expansion, in particular, makes us so happy because it means we have helped more families keep their babies close to home," said Callie.

St. Bernard Foundation President Lydia Parkey has worked closely with the family and says St. Bernards is honored that the family chose to partner with them and memorialize Luke as they have.

"It's encouraging, and it's something we love to see," said Parkey. "When donors have a passion or a dream, we love to be able to meet them and make that happen. The need is always there. Labor and delivery can be beautiful and joyous, but it can also be heart wrenching; not everyone has the same outcome. Dustin and Callie are so inspiring. They are heroes to so many families, heroes in people's lives they don't know and who might ever know who they are but are impacted by their selflessness and generosity."

St. Bernards Medical Center is currently in the middle of an expansion and a reworking to meet the needs of not only the NICU, but the labor and delivery floor, as well. The St. Bernards NICU, which was originally established in 2012 with 12 beds, has grown to 19 beds and is continually adapting and updating to meet area needs.

"The funds from Dustin and Callie have allowed us to meet a need we have here," said Parkey. "St. Bernards is always growing to meet needs, and they help us do that. That fund will always continue to help serve families at St. Bernards."

For those interested in supporting Flags Across Jonesboro, please send an email with a home address to lukesnicufund@gmail.com and make a tax-deductible donation at arcf.org/luke. The prorated rate for the rest of the year would be $60. More information can also be found on Facebook by searching for The Luke Kellums NICU Fund Benefiting St. Bernards.

JULY 2025 JONESBORO OCCASIONS 29

More than 150 youth and adult volunteers convened in Jonesboro in June as part of the Ozark Mission Project. Hosted by First United Methodist Church of Jonesboro, the volunteers completed a variety of projects in service to community members including painting, yardwork and small construction projects.

OZARK MISSION PROJECT PROVIDES WEEK OF SERVICE IN JONESBORO

STORY SUBMITTED PHOTOS BY AUDREY POFF

irst United Methodist Church of Jonesboro hosted the Ozark Mission Project (OMP) from June 8-13, welcoming more than 150 youth and adult volunteers from across Arkansas for a week of hands-on mission work and community outreach.

Volunteers from United Methodist Churches across the stateincluding Pulaski Heights UMC (Little Rock), FUMC Conway, Cabot UMC, FUMC Hot Springs, FUMC Texarkana, and the host church, First United Methodist Church of Jonesboro have come together to serve neighbors in need throughout the Jonesboro area.

Under the guidance of trained college staff and volunteers, the youth completed a variety of projects ranging from painting and yardwork to building wheelchair ramps and offering companionship to local residents. Their week of service was a key part of OMP's mission: to transform lives through worship, fellowship and hands-on mission.

One example is a partnership with Deliverance Family Worship Center in Jonesboro to build a wheelchair ramp outside their Community Outreach Center to make it easier for them to serve the community. "Our church is thrilled to welcome these students and support the life-changing work of OMP," said Dr. Michael Roberts, senior pastor at First United Methodist Church of Jonesboro. "This is faith in action—young people living out the call of Christ by serving with love, humility and joy. Their presence here is a blessing to our neighbors and to our congregation."

Jonesboro resident Charlie Page praised the youth and their leaders for their service to others. While in Jonesboro, the volunteers power washed his home, trimmed shrubs and removed debris, among other tasks.

"They're a blessing," said Page. "They really are. I see God's work being put into action."

Founded as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit of the Arkansas United Methodist Church, Ozark Mission Project organizes summer mission camps for youth. These camps engage students in acts of compassionate service, addressing the needs of the elderly, disabled and low-income families while fostering spiritual growth through shared meals, storytelling and devotions.

For more information about OMP, contact Michael McMurray at (501) 516-1995. To learn more about First United Methodist Church of Jonesboro, located at 801 S. Main St., contact Holly Hall at (870) 243-9631 or visit fumcj.org.

At La Bocca, our journey began with a simple dream and a big passion for Italian cuisine. In 1998, our founders, Rinor and Tony, moved to Jonesboro from a small village in Tuscary, bringing with them generations-old family recipes and a deep love for authentic Italian cooking. What started as a cozy, six-table trattoria quickly became a local favorite, known for its fresh, handmade pastas and Tony's signature marinara sauce.

Over the years, our little restaurant grew, but our commitment to quality and tradition never wavered. Though we've grown, we're still the same family focused establishment where every dish tells a story and every guest feels at home.

Whether it's your first or fiftieth visit, we honor in sharing our love for Italy with you.

6 YEARS IN A ROW!

Thank you! I am truly grateful! Growing up in the beautiful state of Arkansas has given me countless opportunites that have helped instill in me a strong work ethic, resilience, honesty and loyalty to my community.

I believe we all have what it takes to succeed, no matter our nationality or gender, and we all can prosper in this great state and country through hard work! From working in the fields in my younger years, to now operating my own business alongside my husband, I have encountered my share of challenges and used them all as opportunites to succeed.

Whether pursuing my social work degree, raising two young men, or operating a successful cleaning business, I am always working hard for my Lord Jesus Christ.

lux ury listing $659,000 537 Warner Avenue, Jonesboro

WELCOME TO 537 WARNER – A HOME WITH A SOUL, ROOTED IN HISTORY.

Step into a story more than two centuries in the making. Nestled beneath the graceful canopy of three towering trees – each estimated to be more than 200 years old – this home is a rare blend of enduring craftsmanship, character and quiet legacy.

From the moment you enter, the warmth of history greets you. The main floor is heated by charming and highly efficient radiators, offering a cozy, consistent warmth that modern systems simply can't replicate. Built with old-growth wood you simply can't find anymore, this home is a testament to an era when building materials were chosen for strength, longevity and beauty.

The baseboards, ceiling trim and window and door moldings are all constructed of real wood that has been remarkably preserved. It's the kind of craftsmanship that only deepens with age, impossible to replicate with today's mass-produced materials. The hardwood floors are original – their grain and patina bearing the marks of time and care.

Look closely and you'll see the same attention to detail in the cedar lined closets, each of them carefully designed to preserve and protect – just as the home has done for generations.

A story whispered through the bricks: When the kitchen was added, the owners couldn't bear the thought of mismatched materials. Instead, they made the extraordinary decision to rubric the entire house – layer upon layer, so the addition would blend seamlessly. The result? A double-bricked marvel, built not just to stand, but to endure. In the heart of the kitchen sits a true treasure – the original sink. One of fewer than 20 known to still exist intact in the United States, it is both a functional centerpiece and a conversation starter – a piece of living history.

Just outside, the beauty of this historic property continues. Brick walkways elegantly wrap the home, enclosed by a striking brick fence that offers privacy without sacrificing charm. Step into the courtyard where a garden sanctuary blooming with azaleas, hydrangeas and heirloom roses awaits. At its heart, an outdoor fireplace beckons for quiet evenings or gatherings under the stars. Look closely at the top of the fireplace, and you'll discover a small gem – an original brick from the historic Jonesboro Brick Company is embedded like a signature from the past.

The legacy doesn't stop there. This home comes with its original abstract, a rare document that chronicles every chapter of the property's journey, offering a deeper sense of connection for those who value heritage and authenticity.

This historic structure at 537 Warner isn't just a house. It's a home with roots, resilience and remarkable stories waiting to be continued.

Will yours be the next chapter?

Understanding Menopause and Hormone Replacement Therapy

BY LISA TEDDER

ore than half the population undergoes a life-changing event called menopause, and yet women are woefully uneducated about what is happening to their own bodies. Instead, women suffer in silence, never imagining that the various things that seem to be going "wrong" are all connected to the powerful hormonal changes that can begin as early as our 30s. Understanding what happens during perimenopause and post-menopause will empower women to make better health care decisions.

Hormones are a complex topic, but every woman should have a basic understanding of the role estrogen, progesterone and testosterone play. Estrogen stimulates the development of sexual characteristics like breasts, regulates the menstrual cycle and prepares the uterus for pregnancy. It also plays a key role in proper bone growth, optimizes brain function and regulates mood. Progesterone prepares the uterus for implantation of a fertilized egg and supports pregnancy. It is also necessary for maintaining the nervous system, kidney function, bone health, heart health, the immune system and regulating mood.

Both women and men make both these hormones, as they are important for one's health. We think of testosterone as fueling male sexual development and characteristics, but both men and women need it. It is important for libido, sexual function, bone density, muscle mass, regulating mood and maintaining brain function, as well as many other vital functions in both sexes.

The transition from perimenopause to post-menopause typically starts in the 40s and takes many years. Perimenopause is the time when your ovaries are running out of eggs and start to shut down, ending your reproductive years. The hormones estrogen and progesterone fluctuate wildly, trying to prepare the body to release an egg in anticipation of fertilization as it has done since the start of menstruation. This fluctuation triggers a cascade of symptoms. Menopause is the point at which you've gone 12 months without a period; after that you are considered postmenopause. Women's hormone levels fall drastically during this time, but as they age, men's hormones decline more gradually and they notice changes more slowly.

There are estrogen receptors all over your body, which means the loss of hormones can affect your whole body in many ways. Not everyone experiences the same symptoms or the same severity; some women don't notice much at all. For others, these symptoms can be very distressing and disruptive, impacting how a woman feels about herself and making daily life difficult. Symptoms may improve after menopause for some women, but for others, not so much.

Some common symptoms of perimenopause and/or postmenopause are as follows: irregular menstrual cycles, brain fog or memory problems, low libido, dental issues, hot flashes, night sweats, heart palpitations, mood problems like anger, anxiety, depression or memory lapses, insomnia, breast soreness or tenderness, fatigue, skin problems like acne or dryness, sagging, facial hair, urinary incontinence, overactive bladder or increased urinary tract infections, vaginal dryness, weight changes, joint pain, hair loss, and gastrointestinal issues like constipation, bloating, acid reflux.

Many other conditions share these symptoms, so check with your doctor if you have concerns.

Post-menopause sounds great – no more periods, no worry over getting pregnant, and saving money on contraception and period products. But following menopause, your hormone levels will remain low for the rest of your life unless you receive hormone replacement therapy or HRT, and the loss of estrogen and progesterone has several potential health consequences.

Twenty percent of women will develop osteoporosis after menopause, which significantly increases the risk of hip fractures. Fifty percent of people with a hip fracture die within two years. (Note: More women die from hip fractures than from breast cancer.) Estrogen plays a key role in heart health, so women are at increased risk of developing high blood pressure, high cholesterol and triglycerides, all of which can lead to heart attacks and strokes. Estrogen maintains the tissues of the urethra and bladder; after menopause these tissues can thin, increasing incidences of UTIs or urinary incontinence.

UTIs in older women can be harder to diagnosis and lead to complications, hospitalizations and even death if not treated quickly. Low estrogen leads to a decrease in metabolism, so women burn fewer calories, causing weight gain. Along with low libido, women may experience dryness and painful intercourse. Many women struggle with insomnia and mental health issues like depression, anxiety and loss of self-confidence. The risk of dementia and Alzheimer's is higher in women, likely due to the sudden loss of hormones.

A study known as the Women's Health Initiative was published in 2002; it was designed to investigate the effects of HRT on heart disease, breast cancer, osteoporosis and colon cancer. The results of the study, which were misinterpreted, led to fear among women and a decline in the use of HRT.

The good news is there are many evidence-backed treatment options available that can significantly improve your life postmenopause. Focus on lifestyle changes like a healthy diet and doing weight-bearing exercises to keep bones and muscles strong. If you have concerns or questions as you approach perimenopause or menopause, The Menopause Society is a good resource and includes a list of certified providers and specialists in menopause care. Talk with your doctor and ask, "How can the quality of my life improve with hormone replacement therapy?"

(Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series on menopause by Occasions' columnist Lisa Tedder. Next month, she will continue the discussion as she focuses on Hormone Replacement Therapy.) 08.30 vs. SE MISSOURI

The Occasions Lady and...

The Art of Slow Travel

BY AUDREY POFF

arlier this year, Rodney and I took our first vacation as empty nesters. Following a difficult season which included the loss of both of my parents, as well as the wedding celebrations of our four children in four years, we were a little spent. So, the kids helped plan a trip to our favorite beach as a Christmas gift.

It was a different kind of trip. Our itinerary had nothing on it. We planned to sleep late, eat out, walk on the beach, read and ring in 2025 with an early dinner at a favorite restaurant on the bayfront. That lasted about 24 hours.

By the second day, I had managed to crack a rib but didn't know it until we got back home. In hindsight, I'm not sure that I would have ventured out of the condo all week if I had known the source of my pain. Breathing was difficult and I shrieked every time I sneezed, hiccupped, tried to sleep or when we hit one of a thousand speed bumps between Florida and Arkansas. I scaled back a bit, convincing myself that it was another kidney stone wreaking havoc.

Somewhere along the way, travel for many of us became a competitive sport. When the kids are vacationing with us, we try to do all of the things. From deep sea fishing and bike rides on the beach to pickleball and marathon shopping, we play until we drop. By the time we get home, we need a vacation from our vacation. That's where slow travel rolls into play. Think quiet, chill and possibly wearing linen as you sip tropical drinks, enjoy fine dining and stroll through art galleries.

I think the slow travel trend is perfect for empty nesters, and with a cracked rib, I had all the incentive I needed to embrace slowing down.

Simply put, slow travel is the radical idea that maybe you don't need to see all of Italy in six days. Maybe you can sit at a café for two hours drinking overpriced coffee that comes with a tiny biscuit. Or perhaps you rent a small vacation home in the mountains and visit off-the-beaten path venues that are favorites among the locals, rather than attempting to hit every ski resort in the vicinity.

The slow travel movement is about digging deeper instead of racing faster. It's about experiencing one place fully—tasting, listening, wandering around new places without Google Maps, and perhaps even getting lost without having a meltdown. Instead, you simply embrace it and perhaps make new discoveries along the way.

Slow travelers are committed. They rent cottages. They shop at local markets. They make friends with cheese mongers. They take naps—the intentional kinds of naps, not the jet lagged kind where you crash in an airport before the next flight.

Slow travel is more of a mindset. Some say it's also a form of rebellion. You are telling the world: "I could rush, but I won't. I could do it all, but I'd rather sit here sipping something warm while my itinerary gathers dust in my laptop bag."

As long as there are children and grandchildren in the mix, we will likely continue to go at warp speed to do whatever is on the itinerary. Frequently for our family, however, that results in at least one trip to urgent care as part of our excursions. It's all fun and games until someone cracks a rib or slices their foot on an oyster bed.

As empty nesters, Rodney and I look forward to every family vacation we can manage, but we also look forward to embracing the art of slow travel in the future.

Summer vacation is here. Why not savor a slower pace? Bon voyage and don't hurry back.
